

EURA 2016 - Urban Walk

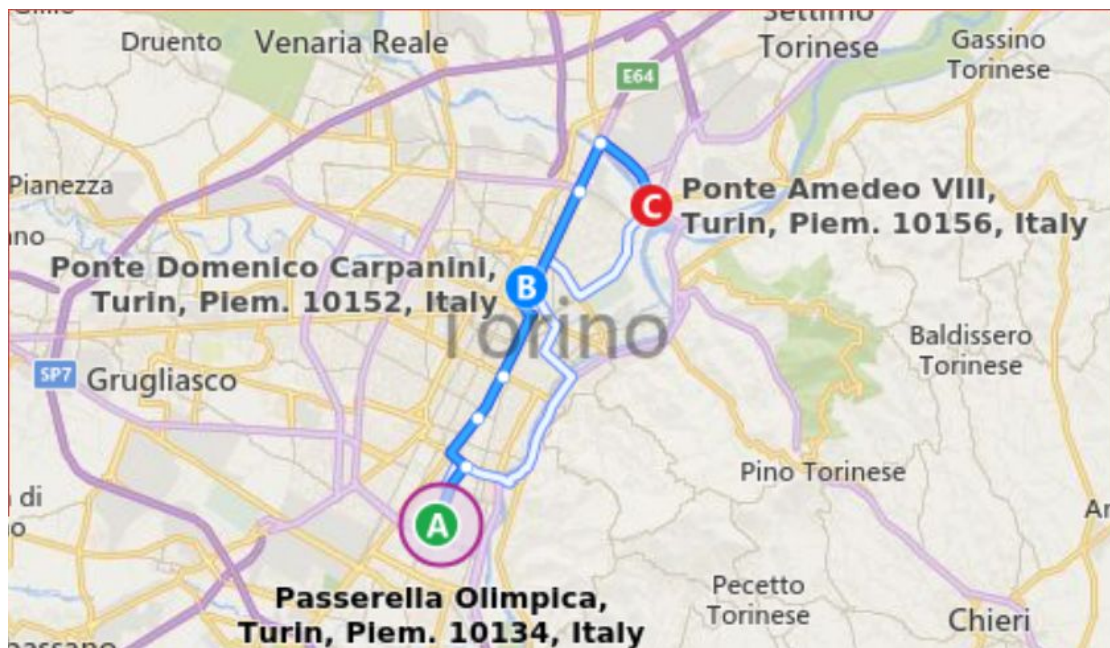

19 June 2016, 2pm Castello del Valentino, at the entrance gate

Turin at the margins: A view from the bridge

Organisers: Michele Lancione and Elisabetta Rosa

Turin's marginalised spaces and populations are numerous and nuanced. With this urban walk we aim to approach three of these spaces in order to sense their complexity and invite further explorations and reflections. Conscious of the limits of such exercise, and out of respect for the people that perform spaces, our walk will be centered around two/three bridges that - metaphorically and infrastructurally - connects mainstream Turin to its margins. The first bridge is the Passerella Olimpica, where we will hear the story of the refugees that are currently occupying the ex Olympic Village. The second bridge is the Ponte Carpanini, in the Porta Palazzo area, where we will discuss about homelessness and services for homeless people in Turin. The third bridge is on the other side of the city, in the Lungo Stura Lazio's area (Ponte Amedeo VIII, where we will approach the story of the Roma people living on the river's banks. This walk is connected to the presentation of the book 'Rethinking Life at the Margins', which will be launched at the 'Via Baltea' centre in the evening.

This is a map of our 'walk', which will be mainly done using the public transport of the city:
